

religions and devotees, as religions and devotees of religions do not logically think, but they strongly align to ignorance and illusion.

The attitudes of religions and devotees consider a person behaves after the death like a human with a material body and soul or spirit, without a material body exercises power in which the status is quite difficult to interpret as living human has no such experience. This situation cannot be tested because the concept of testing is a practical activity that relates to the material body, and after the destruction of the material body, it cannot recognize as human and many religions and devotees of religions attempt to interpret the dead human also behaves like a living human. Is it a scientifically acceptable truth or a mythical belief that needs to clearly understand is needed to comprehend by people? As religious devotees are covered by mythical beliefs, people don't attempt to understand the reality of beliefs because mythical beliefs help to gain mental reliefs.

After the oil crisis in the early 1970s many Middle Eastern countries gained an economic power which was interpreted by Middle Eastern clerics that oil resources obtained by specific blessing of God and ordinary people attempted to understand that such power gained by them especially as a blessing of God. It is not an accurate idea because oil discovered in non-Islam countries too. People in the Middle Eastern countries attempted to expand power to other countries in the name of God, but they have ignored the fundamental concept that God is justice. Later people discovered oil in other countries and seems that oil power is deteriorating and many Middle Eastern countries are persuasive in science and technology.

Religions have holy books, which are believed to be contain religious mysteries or the philosophy. These holy books were written by human and originally, they were not religious books, but they were writing to read for people as literature. It is quite difficult to trace the original writers who wrote the books. I found many contradict views in holy books and the story or messages are given in the Bible (Old Testament and New Testament), Quran, the Book of Momen, and Wayda books in Hinduism are contained similar views and sometimes, I feels that all writings were copied from one source to another. Similarly, stories in Buddhism and Hinduism are appeared to be similar. For example, stories in Jataka book can be seen in other books such as Ishop's parables. It needs to understand a story goes from one country another and the original story has altered in the new environment.

I read in the internet that the major functions of religions are to provide social cohesion, help maintaining social solidarity through shared rituals and beliefs, and social controls to enforce religious based morals and norms to help maintain conformity and controls in the society. Many religions work consistent with these functions, but the madness of devotees in religions to go out of the functions. The recent terror incidents in Sri Lanka shows an instance that demonstrated the madness of devotees going out of the functions of religions. People have no idea who were behind such a disastrous attack.

Tarweed (there is no God but Allah himself) is a concept in Islam, Judaism, Christianity, and Hinduism. Buddhism deviates from this concept but insists there is a world of many Gods in the status of transmigration of soul or spirit. Logically, if people believe almighty God, there wouldn't be many almighty Gods for different religions. There are two major point to believe in an almighty God, one is the wonderful universe which contains million of galaxies and such a wonderful universe could not originate automatically and need a creation by a God, the other point is in galaxies, there is a natural order, which has not been changing and continuing since the origin of the universe. Based on the two points, it encourages to believe in an almighty God. Science and scientist also have no clear evidence to prove that there is no almighty God. The modern human and the universe may have been a result of evolution, but the question is how evolution began. In such an environment, the existence of an almighty God is possible.

The religious concept is attractively interpreted by Teilhard Shardan and he published two vital books, the Phenomena of Man and La Milieu Divine. He explained the concept of, the theory of evolution and many matters. It appears that all religions attempt give a unique message but metaphysics, epistemology, axiology and logic or religions may be different from one religion to other.
